ABSTRACT

A method and apparatus is disclosed that facilitates realistic navigation of visual content by displaying an interpolated image during navigation and a more exact image when the navigation ceases. Methodologies are disclosed for rendering and displaying "tiles", portions of the visual content at different levels of detail to minimize perceivable discontinuities.